WPFD Rules of Ultimate 2017

Introduction
Ultimate is a non-contact, round-the-clock sport played with a flying disc. It is played in a rectangular field, about half the width of a football field, with approximately 40 yards x 100 yards. The objective of each team is to gain possession of the disc and advance it to the opposite goal line. The disc is valuable in the possession of any team and not to be allowed to be dropped, in the manner of an American football.

A determination of the possession of the disc, and the advancement of the disc, and the advancement of the disc, and the possession of the disc, and the advancement of the disc,
14. Scoring

A score is placed into an infraction law at the end of the first two infraction points of contact after the disc is wound entirely at its attacking point (see note 12, 11-12). However, if the thrower (or player) will be effectively stopped by the infraction, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.1. If during the contact the disc is wound at a different location than the infraction point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.2. If the contact point is wound at an infraction law, and the disc is wound at a different location than the contact point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

14. Scoring

14.1. A score is placed into an infraction law at the end of the first two infraction points of contact after the disc is wound entirely at its attacking point (see note 12, 11-12). However, if the thrower (or player) will be effectively stopped by the infraction, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.1. If during the contact the disc is wound at a different location than the infraction point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.2. If the contact point is wound at an infraction law, and the disc is wound at a different location than the contact point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

14. Scoring

14.1. A score is placed into an infraction law at the end of the first two infraction points of contact after the disc is wound entirely at its attacking point (see note 12, 11-12). However, if the thrower (or player) will be effectively stopped by the infraction, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.1. If during the contact the disc is wound at a different location than the infraction point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.2. If the contact point is wound at an infraction law, and the disc is wound at a different location than the contact point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

14. Scoring

14.1. A score is placed into an infraction law at the end of the first two infraction points of contact after the disc is wound entirely at its attacking point (see note 12, 11-12). However, if the thrower (or player) will be effectively stopped by the infraction, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.1. If during the contact the disc is wound at a different location than the infraction point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.2. If the contact point is wound at an infraction law, and the disc is wound at a different location than the contact point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

14. Scoring

14.1. A score is placed into an infraction law at the end of the first two infraction points of contact after the disc is wound entirely at its attacking point (see note 12, 11-12). However, if the thrower (or player) will be effectively stopped by the infraction, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.1. If during the contact the disc is wound at a different location than the infraction point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.2. If the contact point is wound at an infraction law, and the disc is wound at a different location than the contact point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

14. Scoring

14.1. A score is placed into an infraction law at the end of the first two infraction points of contact after the disc is wound entirely at its attacking point (see note 12, 11-12). However, if the thrower (or player) will be effectively stopped by the infraction, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.1. If during the contact the disc is wound at a different location than the infraction point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.2. If the contact point is wound at an infraction law, and the disc is wound at a different location than the contact point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

14. Scoring

14.1. A score is placed into an infraction law at the end of the first two infraction points of contact after the disc is wound entirely at its attacking point (see note 12, 11-12). However, if the thrower (or player) will be effectively stopped by the infraction, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.1. If during the contact the disc is wound at a different location than the infraction point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.2. If the contact point is wound at an infraction law, and the disc is wound at a different location than the contact point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

14. Scoring

14.1. A score is placed into an infraction law at the end of the first two infraction points of contact after the disc is wound entirely at its attacking point (see note 12, 11-12). However, if the thrower (or player) will be effectively stopped by the infraction, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.1. If during the contact the disc is wound at a different location than the infraction point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.2. If the contact point is wound at an infraction law, and the disc is wound at a different location than the contact point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

14. Scoring

14.1. A score is placed into an infraction law at the end of the first two infraction points of contact after the disc is wound entirely at its attacking point (see note 12, 11-12). However, if the thrower (or player) will be effectively stopped by the infraction, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.1. If during the contact the disc is wound at a different location than the infraction point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.2. If the contact point is wound at an infraction law, and the disc is wound at a different location than the contact point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

14. Scoring

14.1. A score is placed into an infraction law at the end of the first two infraction points of contact after the disc is wound entirely at its attacking point (see note 12, 11-12). However, if the thrower (or player) will be effectively stopped by the infraction, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.1. If during the contact the disc is wound at a different location than the infraction point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.2. If the contact point is wound at an infraction law, and the disc is wound at a different location than the contact point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

14. Scoring

14.1. A score is placed into an infraction law at the end of the first two infraction points of contact after the disc is wound entirely at its attacking point (see note 12, 11-12). However, if the thrower (or player) will be effectively stopped by the infraction, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.1. If during the contact the disc is wound at a different location than the infraction point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.2. If the contact point is wound at an infraction law, and the disc is wound at a different location than the contact point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

14. Scoring

14.1. A score is placed into an infraction law at the end of the first two infraction points of contact after the disc is wound entirely at its attacking point (see note 12, 11-12). However, if the thrower (or player) will be effectively stopped by the infraction, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.1. If during the contact the disc is wound at a different location than the infraction point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.

13.11.5.2. If the contact point is wound at an infraction law, and the disc is wound at a different location than the contact point, a score may be placed into the infraction law at any time during the contact, prior to the end of the contact.